

Articles

- 483–508 The Universal and Undying Appeal of Rudyard Kipling’s
Just So Stories for Little Children
WILLIAM B. DILLINGHAM
- 509–532 “The Portrait of Mr W. H.,” Textual Identity, and Oscar Wilde’s “Incalculable Injury”
IAN SMALL
- 533–558 Seeking the “Irish Dimension” in Oscar Wilde’s
The Picture of Dorian Gray: “What Does This Mean?”
RICHARD HASLAM
- 559–579 Oscar Wilde’s Aesthetics of Perception
JOHN G. PETERS
- 580–590 Edward Thomas and the Imagination
MARTIN BROOKS
- 591–611 History and the Everyday in Arnold Bennett’s
The Old Wives’ Tale
RYAN JOHN EDWARDS

612–623 Evoking Charles Dickens’s St. Evrémonde and Gaspard
in Edith Nesbit’s “The Violet Car”:
“Drive Him Fast to His Tomb”
TERRY W. THOMPSON

624–643 Uncovering the Influence of Mary Eliza Haweis
in Mina Loy’s “Anglo-Mongrels and the Rose”:
“Consider your mother-in-law’s stays”
CHARLOTTE ANNE WHALEN

644–650 English Literature in Contradiction
REGENIA GAGNIER

651 Books Received

652 1957–2020 Finis

Cover Rudyard Kipling Just So Stories

London: Macmillan & Co. 1902